

Moment of Truth: PeerStreet — Video Transcript

[MUSIC]

Life at Google was amazing. Ten years, had a wonderful career. And then along came Brew, one of my college buddies, trying to convince me to leave all of that to build a new business with him. And I was like, “wow, that sounds like a great idea.”

And so I took the idea to this guy who, months before the recession, realized the whole real estate finance industry was a house of cards. And he said this is really a massive opportunity, and I was like “wow, would you be interested in being an adviser?” And he said, “I don’t want to be an adviser, I want to be the investor.” And that’s when I knew this was a risk worth taking.
